On three different occasions Lieutenant Aitken went into the garden under the enemy's loopholes in the 'Captain's Bazaar.' On two of these occasions he brought out a number of bull-carts which had been left in the garden; subsequently, on the 3rd July, the enemy having set fire to the Bhooza Stock in the garden, and it being apprehended that the fire would reach the powder magazine which had been left there, Lieutenant Aitken, accompanied by other Officers, went into the garden, and cut down all the tents which might have communicated the fire to the powder. This was done close to the enemy's loopholes, under a bright light from the flames; it was a most dangerous service. 2. On the night of the 20th August, the enemy having set fire to the Baillie Guard Gate, Lieutenant Aitken was the first man in the gateway, and, assisted by some sepoy and a water-carrier of his regiment, he partially opened the gate under a heavy fire of musketry, and, having removed the burning wood and straw, saved the gate. 3. On the evening of the 25th September the Officer led on twelve sepoy of his regiment, for the purpose of attacking two guns opposite the gate referred to, in order to prevent their being turned on the late Major General Havelock's second Column. Having captured them, he attacked and took the Terce Kotce, with a small force. 4. On the morning of the 26th September, with a small party of his regiment, he assaulted and captured the barricaded gateway of the Furreed Buksh Palace, and the Palace itself. On this occasion he sprang up against a small wicket gate on the right, and prevented the enemy from shutting it, until, with assistance, it was forced open, and the assaulting party were thus enabled to rush in. The complete success of the attack was solely owing to this Officer's distinguished bravery. 5. In a subsequent sortie on the 29th September, Lieutenant Aitken volunteered to take a gun which still continued firing, taking with him four soldiers through the houses and lanes to the gun. The enemy fired on this party from the houses, but they held their ground, until a stronger party coming up, the gun was upset from the carriage, and taken into the Residency. Another gun was subsequently taken.

Douglas was decorated with the Victoria Cross, together with four Privates of the 24th Regiment, "for the very gallant and daring manner in which, on the 7th May 1897, they risked their lives in maintaining a surf and proceeding through a dangerous surf to the rescue of some of their comrades, who formed part of an expedition which had been sent to the island of Little Andaman, by order of the Chief Commissioner of British Borneo, with the view of ascertaining the fate of the commander and seven of the crew of the ship Arcturion, who had landed there, and were supposed to have been murdered by the natives." The Officer commanded the troops on the occasion reports: "About an hour later in the day, Dr. Douglas, and Battalion, 24th Regiment, and the four privates referred to, gallantly manning the second gig, made their way through the surfaltness to the shore, but finding their boat was half-filled with water, they retired. A second attempt made by Dr. Douglas and party proved successful, five of us being safely passed through the surf to the boats outside. A third and last trip got the whole of the party left on shore safe to the boat." It is stated that Dr. Douglas accomplished these trips through the surf to the shore by no ordinary exertion. He stood in the bows of the boat, and worked her in an intrepid and seamanlike manner, cool to a degree, as if what he was then doing was an ordinary act of everyday life. The four privates behaved in an equally cool and collected manner, rowing through the roughest surf when the slightest hesitation or want of pluck on the part of any one of them would have been attended by the gravest results. It is reported that seventeen officers and men were thus saved from what must otherwise have been a fearful risk, if not certain death."
